Status:

Type 1 employment
Three-quarter – Full Time,
Health insurance, benefit and retirement eligible

Position title: RESEARCH BIOLOGISTS (Job Reference # OR 01_10)

Description: ABR is seeking a team-oriented, mid-level biologist to participate in our ornithological research programs. Primary duties will focus upon field work for and management of avian field studies. Potential projects include visual and radar studies of general migration patterns and of movements of focal species, population surveys of threatened and endangered species (e.g., northern spotted owls and marbled murrelets), standard point-count surveys, and other applied research studies.

ABR, Inc.—Environmental Research & Services is a long-established private scientific consulting firm headquartered in Fairbanks, AK; with branch offices in Anchorage, AK, Forest Grove, OR, and Greenfield, MA. ABR offers a wide range of specialty ecological services, including ornithological-radar surveys, bat acoustic monitoring, seabird and marine-mammal surveys, endangered-species consultations, and bird and bat migration studies. In addition, ABR recently has been providing wildlife consultation to state and federal agencies, the wind industry, other energy utilities, and communications companies in Alaska, Hawaii, the Continental US, and abroad.

Qualifications:

- Minimum of Master's degree in Biology, Wildlife Biology, or Natural Sciences;
- three years experience conducting field research studies on birds; experience with radar, endangered species, auditory and visual identification of bird species, and/or plant surveys a plus;
- excellent field skills and oral and written skills; additional technical skills helpful;
- data-analysis, statistical, and report-writing skills;
- willingness to spend extended periods at field sites;
- valid driver's license and ability to drive standard transmission vehicles;
- ability to lift and carry (over short distances) up to 60 pounds
- attention to detail

Salary: Depending on qualifications and experience. Excellent benefits.

Closing date: Open until all positions filled.
